

About Durbin

Durbin was founded as a retail pharmacy in Harrow, London in 1963. It began wholesale dealing for customers in the UK, and has expanded over the last 50 years. Today the company exports quality assured pharmaceuticals and medical supplies to healthcare professionals in over 180 countries.

In November 2002, Durbin acquired the trading activity of the charity ECHO International Health Services – one of the leading UK suppliers of medical equipment and pharmaceuticals to the non-commercial sector. Continuing the tradition of ECHO, this catalogue consists of the latest products in the healthcare market at extremely competitive prices.

The Durbin team consists of a 100-strong workforce of pharmacists, medical engineers, commercial executives and warehouse/freight staff. The team are at your disposal to help answer any questions that you require to meet your needs – there is an extraordinary range of in-house skills and expertise.

Durbin can respond to healthcare supply needs from local project level to national scale programmes for a variety of customers including: government, multilateral and procurement agencies, non-governmental organisations, charities, missionary groups, pharmaceutical wholesalers, hospitals and retail chemists. With a wide range of stock at our warehouse, we are also able to assist with rapid reaction to healthcare crisis situations as well as longer-term requirements.

Durbin is licensed as a Wholesale Dealer for Pharmaceuticals by the Medicines & Healthcare Products Regulatory Authority (MHRA), a division of the UK Department of Health and is also a member of the London Chamber of Commerce.
